Who We Are

Our attorneys provide a wide range of legal services and counseling to our business clients, from the inception of a project through the successful implementation of business objectives. We understand the importance of placing our client's business objectives at the center of our relationship and working with an experienced team of advisors to provide the highest level of service to the client. We seek long-term relationships with our clients based on serving as a trusted advisor that brings valuable insight, perspective and advice to the task at hand.

Our attorneys possess diverse experience in a variety of areas and serve business clients ranging in size from sole proprietorships and closely-held entities to major public companies. We provide our collective experience to address complicated, multifaceted projects in a coordinated cost-effective manner. With our state-of-the-art communications, research and document production capabilities we can efficiently work as part of a team to address a client's legal needs and effectively coordinate provision of professional services in various office locations.

In counseling the entrepreneur or the business executive on business matters and strategic planning, we seek to minimize the costs and impact of legal requirements on the business operations while providing lasting value to the business enterprise. In pursuing that goal, we act as special counsel for certain projects requiring specialized experience and resources, or as general counsel, for both closely-held business entities and large corporations.

Contract Preparation and Review

A staple of our business and corporate practice is the preparation and review of business contracts. We have more than 30 business attorneys who have experience drafting and reviewing business agreements of all types. Our business attorneys have access to a vast computer database of agreements prepared within our firm, a useful and cost-saving drafting tool.

Whether reviewing a contract prepared by another party or drafting a contract ourselves, we strive to capture the terms of the deal which have been reached by the parties while at the same time protecting our client from unanticipated consequences or liabilities. We endeavor to write our contracts in plain and understandable terms, avoiding "legalese" whenever possible.

Here is just a sampling of some of the types of agreements which are routinely prepared or reviewed by our business attorneys:

- sales representative, distributor and other marketing agreements;
- shareholder, partnership and limited liability company agreements;
- supply and/or manufacturing agreements;
- employment contracts;
- consulting, brokerage, and other independent contractor agreements;
- service contracts;
- purchase order, acknowledgment and quotation terms and conditions;
- license agreements;
- merger, acquisition and joint venture agreements;
- confidentiality agreements;
- financing documents.

Mergers, Acquisitions and Joint Ventures

Our attorneys represent clients in a wide range of business combinations and divestitures for both public and private companies, including mergers, stock and asset transactions, leveraged buy-outs, spinoffs, divestitures, tender offers, proxy contests and joint ventures. Transactions range in size and complexity from the sale of a medical practice to the multi-million dollar leveraged buy-out of a manufacturing concern with facilities in several states.

Merger and acquisition work is handled primarily by transactional attorneys in our Business Law Department, who are supported as needed, by other departments and practice groups in the firm, including Employee Benefits, Environmental, Intellectual Property, Labor and Employment, and Tax.

Mergers, sales, relocations and other basic organizational changes can no longer be undertaken without considering the labor and employment impact of those decisions, whether it be in the context of bargaining and contractual obligations, discrimination issues or employee benefit implications. Our lawyers routinely work with employers to ensure compliance in these areas, regardless of whether the organizational change involves a merger, stock acquisition, assets transfer, alliance, relocation, bankruptcy or any of the other contexts in which organizational changes routinely occur. Rather than have these labor and employment law concerns serve as a barrier to change, we can help you achieve your business goals while you comply with your statutory obligations. In addition, we can analyze and recommend organizational changes to achieve desired outcomes with respect to union representation and contract matters.

Because our client base is diverse, our transactional attorneys have experience in handling mergers, acquisitions and joint ventures in many different industry sectors.
